Early evolution : The earliest films were simply one static shot that showed an event or action with no editing or other cinematic techniques. Typical films showed employees leaving a factory gate, people walking in the street, the view from the front of a trolly as it traveled a city's Main Street. According to legend, when a film showed a locomotive at high speed approaching the audience, the audience panicked and ran from the theater. Around the turn of the 20th century, films started stringing several scenes together to tell a story. The filmmakers who first put several shots or scenes discovered that, when one shot follows another, that act establishes a relationship between the content in the separate shots in the minds of the viewer. It this relationship that makes all film storytelling possible. In a simple example, if a person is shown looking out a window, whatever the next shot shows, it will be regarded as the view the person was seeing. Each scene was a single stationary shot with the action occurring before it. The scenes were later broken up into multiple shots photographed from different distances and angles. Other techniques such as camera movement were developed as effective ways to tell a story with film. Until sound film became commercially practical in the late 1920s, motion pictures were a purely visual art, but these innovative silent films had gained a hold on the public imagination. Rather than leave audiences with only the noise of the projector as an accompaniment, theater owners hired a pianist or organist or, in large urban theaters, a full orchestra to play music that fit the mood of the film at any given moment. By the early 1920s, most films came with a prepared list of sheet music to be used for this purpose, and complete film scores were composed for major productions.

The Chinese film industry had lost US billion by March 2020, having closed all its cinemas during the Lunar New Year period that sustains the industry across Asia.2 North America saw its lowest box office weekend since 1998 between March 13–15.3 Demon Slayer: Mugen Train, the highest-grossing film of 2020, earned 3 million worldwide.4 It was the first time since 2007 that the top-grossing film of a given year had earned less than billion and the first time a non-American film was the top-grossing film of the year.5

On May 3, 2021, the governors of Connecticut, New Jersey, and New York jointly announced that they planned to lift most capacity restrictions on businesses on May 19 for cinemas in New York, they would not be limited in how many patrons may be present, but there must be 6 feet 1.8 m social distancing between groups.209210 On May 4, Los Angeles County was moved to yellow Minimal tier by state health officials,211 but the LACDPH did not allow cinemas to use the 75% option.212 Due to progress on vaccination, New York and California lifted capacity restrictions, including those on cinemas, in June 2021.213214 By August 2021, however, due to spread of Delta variant and waning vaccination rates nationwide, New York City where only 55% of residents were fully-vaccinated announced on August 3 that effective September 13, access to indoor entertainment venues including cinemas will be restricted to those who are vaccinated.215216 In October 2021, Los Angeles announced that starting November 4 residents will be required to show proof of a COVID-19 vaccination to enter movie theaters.217
